1. The gift for E-sau start-ed in ad-vance

while Ja-cob spent the night in a-gi-ta-tion,

whose wives and child-ren wit-nessed how a trance

act-ed to coun-ter fear-ful i-so-la-tion.

God or the an-gel wres-tled till the morn-ing,

striking the ver-y sock-et of the hip,

quite out of joint, with ag-o-ny and scorn-ing

who'd be up on top in the cham-pion-ship.

2. That man no long-er wished to in-ter-vene.

"Let go of me, for day is fin-ally break-ing."

But Ja-cob would not floun-der in-be-tween,

irked lest a bless-ing pass be-fore the tak-ing.

"Now be your name, yes, Is-ra-el you're giv-en,

known by the world as qual-i-fied to rule,

since you've im-ped-ed God by how you've striv-en,

took ri-vals to task and main-tained your cool.

I beg you, with a bless-ing be re-ply-ing.

"And why should this pe-ti-tion be ad-dressed?"

Right here a bless-ing, quick, for which you're pry-ing.

'This is a place of rev-er-ent ven-er-a-tion,

since I have wit-ness-ed heav-en face to face.

And I've sur-ri-ved this re-cent dem-on-stration

to see the sun rise, though I limp a trace.
